First, they are not presently available, and there are few signs that Washington or London would be prepared to transfer their most cutting edge nuclear propulsion and defence technology to any country, even a close ally like Australia.

Japan, India and the countries of Southeast Asia have a much more immediate stake in containing the reach of Chinese power.

Canberra would, in my view, be far better served by emulating key aspects of China's own sea-denial strategy, which blurs strategically defensive objectives with an offensive war-fighting doctrine to clear rival navies out of designated areas.

s visit took place obscured the fact that the region really is changing for the

Taken together, the message was clear: the United States would set and enforce the rules in Asia, and other powers notably China would be expected to adhere to them.

This piece was originally published in The Diplomat Tweet Tuesday Nov 15 2011 Interdependence and the Limits of Such an alliance seems to be aimed at only one nation, China.

In buying or leasing British or American SSNs, Australia would find itself almost completely beholden to the goodwill of a foreign power for its basic defense, with potentially deleterious implications for its policy of national self-reliance.
