This piece was originally published in The Diplomat Tweet Tuesday Nov 15 2011 Interdependence and the Limits of Japan, India and the countries of Southeast Asia have a much more immediate stake in containing the reach of Chinese power.

In buying or leasing British or American SSN s, Australia would find itself almost completely beholden to the goodwill of a foreign power for its basic defense, with potentially deleterious implications for its policy of national self-reliance.

First, they are not presently available, and there are few signs that Washington or London would be prepared to transfer their most cutting edge nuclear propulsion and defence technology to any country, even a close ally like Australia.

It s time to begin planning for alternatives.

Canberra would, in my view, be far better served by emulating key aspects of China s own sea-denial strategy, which blurs strategically defensive objectives with an offensive war-fighting doctrine to clear rival navies out of designated areas.

Ross Babbage wrote a recent article in The Diplomat advocating for U.S.

Taken together, the message was clear: the United States would set and enforce the rules in Asia, and other powers notably China would be expected to adhere to them.
